Strategic planning is a systematic process which enables a community's leadership to understand the varying future environments in which the community will exist, establish consensus about how best to achieve its most desired vision, and illuminate the actions that will most likely make that happen all within the context of expected available financial and human resources. In short, strategic planning helps communities guide their futures. Staff has recommended Dr. Gerald Gabris and Peter Burchard lead a strategic planning process for the City of Sterling. They are here to present their proposal to the Council and answer any questions the Council may have. Staff would propose taking action on the proposal at the April 6th Council Meeting so that staff can begin the background work and the new Council can engage in the process this summer.
